

For Douglas Macmillan from Faye Johnson

Fashion Show at Ipstones

A group of friends have organised a night of fashion and fun in order to raise funds for the Douglas Macmillan Hospice.

The fashion show, which is due to take place on the 16th September at Ipstones Memorial Hall in Stoke-on-Trent, is being organised by Nicola Edwards and a group of her friends.

Nicola said: “Ten or twenty years ago, I didn’t know anybody with cancer and now, I know too many people.”

“I’ve always done the Midnight to Sunrise Walk and stuff like that, but I thought it would be nice to just give a bit more and have a bit of fun doing it as well.”

Local people, such as the District Nurses from Leek Health Centre and the Ipstones Village Firemen, will be modelling in the show. The ladies will be wearing dresses designed by Gino Cerruti and the men will wear dinner jackets supplied by Chaplins Menswear.

The show will be split into themed sections such as, ‘Day At The Races’, ‘Party Collection’, ‘Prom Dresses’, ‘Bridal Wear’ and ‘Evening Wear’. Dresses will be available to purchase at the event, prices will range from approximately £40 to £300. Ten percent of the profits from these sales will be donated to the Hospice, as well as proceeds from the ticket sales and raffle.

The fashion show starts at 7.30pm, tickets cost £5 and are available from Chaplins Menswear stores in Leek and Cheadle.
